Overview

Mid-Autumn Festival is an important harvest festival on the lunar calendar. In this tour, you can celebrate like a local with lantern displays, traditional mooncakes and the very exciting historical dragon dance.

Toy Street Sham Shui Po

The tour begins with visiting a very local district Sham Shui Po. Fuk Wing Street is well known as the "Toy Street", you can explore different shops with old and new toys that would delight both olds and youngs. During mid-Autumn Festival period, every shop is full of festive toys and lanterns at wholesale prices.

Traditional Chinese Bakeries

Traditional Chinese bakeries are getting rare in Hong Kong. Pat Sin Bakery more than half-century old, and is most famous for its moon-cakes. These fine cakes are hand-made with fine-chosen ingredients, reasonably priced, and dearly loved by district residents.

Mid-Autumn Lantern Carnivals

You have just seen the handy size lanterns at Toy Street, next we want to take you to the Victoria Park Carnival for the huge ones. It is the largest lantern exhibition in the city which showcases different festive lanterns and their related stories.

Peking Duck Dinner

Before we hop to the Fire Dragon Dance, you will be shown to a nice restaurant for a lovely Peking Duck dinner. It is one of the most celebrated dishes of Chinese cuisine with a history of more than 400 years.

Tai Hang Fire Dragon Dance

Tai Hang Fire Dragon Dance is the most extraordinary events during Mid-Autumn Festival. It is so unique and so important, and was inscribed on the third national list of "Intangible Cultural Heritage" by the Ministry of Culture in China. Tai Hang was originally a small village which was hit by a plague in the late 19th century. Villages were told to perform the Fire Dragon Dance and burn firecrackers during the Mid-Autumn Festival to drive the plague away. The Fire Dragon is made up of 32 segments weighing over 200 pounds with the head alone weighing 100 pounds.
